Scenes in London To-Day as the Body of the Queen Was Borne to Paddington Station.

BRILLIANT BUT MOURNFUL PROCESSION

Men, Women and Children Pay Tribute to the Dead Sovereign—Enormous Throngs Viewed the Cortège Along the Route.

(Associated Press.)
Portsmouth, Feb. 2.—Before 9 o'clock this morning the remains of the Queen were taken from the Royal yacht Alberta to a special carriage and conveyed to the King's train, which started for London at 8:53 a.m. amidst the boom of the guns of the fort.
The scene was pathetic and imposing. The King, accompanied by Queen Alexandra and some Princesses who passed the night on board the Royal yacht Victoria and Albert, proceeded to the Royal yacht Alberta in a steam launch. King Edward boarded the yacht at 8:45, five minutes after Emperor William had steamed alongside the Alberta from the Hohenzollern. The guard of honor on board consisted of several hundred marines and bluejackets. The commanders of the warships which took part in yesterday's pageant

Had Already Assembled under the covered way leading from the yacht to the railroad station. There was a short service on the yacht before the body was removed, the Duke of Connaught, the Crown Prince of Germany, Prince Arthur of Connaught, Prince Henry of Prussia, the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha and Princess Henry of Battenberg being present. The only mourning garb visible was in the dresses of Princesses.

strains of the funeral march, and the sound of the wind driven rain which was then falling in torrents. The coffin was placed on the dais, and Admiral Sir Nowell Salmon, admiral of the fleet since 1899, King Edward, Queen Alexandra, Emperor William and other members of the Royal family took their seats and the train moved off.
Gathering in the Streets.
London, Feb. 2, 9:17 a.m.—The gray day of the London morning, with the sky draped with fleecy clouds, proclaimed ideal conditions for the funeral day of England's Queen. The calm serenity of the atmosphere was reflected by the crowds which at daylight began to assemble at every point of vantage along the route of the royal obsequies. So soft, peaceful and noiseless was the progress of the hosts that the constantly swelling throngs and the rhythmic tread on the solemn stillness.

The early scenes were unlike those of any spectacular plays which London has witnessed in the past years. The crowds which so gathered in the streets this morning evinced an entire lack of feverish unrest and excitement. Great masses of police which assembled in

The Grayness of the Morning seemed to tiptoe to their allotted stations as though their presence reflected on the solemnity dominating everything. Never did a concourse of people so little need either civil or military guidance. No man standing by his mother's bier, eyes needed admonition less than did those hundreds of thousands of men and women gathered from all parts of the Kingdom on the funeral route of the Queen.

The strangest of all was the fact that the women seemed to outnumber the men. While ribboned nurses marked almost every yard along the route. Troops there were, to be sure, thousands upon thousands assembling spectre-like out of the morning mists, their

Black Overcoats and Bearskins deepening the note of mourning pervading everything. In the great green spaces of Hyde park, St. James's and others, these long black lines stood silhouetted against the morning sky, solemn, silent and picturesque, staunchly stemming the on-rush of that endless flood of people pouring in from every street and avenue.

Purple was the tone of the mourning, and this seemed almost a relief contrasted with these silent masses of black garbed crowds.
It was the true note, after all, of the days ceremonial, for no one among England's heartstricken people could look upon the finished life of their Queen with feelings of entire gloom.

The troops began to move less early than on Proclamation day. That was the only day of the official pronouncement of the death of the Queen.

Authority of the King, and the streets were closed as if by magic, and with a tone of authority that did not mark this mourning's scenes.
Buckingham Palace, the great hotels about Victoria station, the princely home in Park Lane and every shop and house thence to Paddington, bore ample evidence of their grief, and together with the purple and white festoons, wreaths of bay and laurel were hanging from every post, while flags at half-mast bordered with crepe told in a dignified simple manner the story of the nation's loss.

The Procession.
London, Feb. 2.—With every circumstance of splendid pomp, befitting the exequies of a mighty and well-beloved monarch, all that is mortal of Queen Victoria was borne through the streets of the capital to-day, in its progress towards the ancient palace of the coverings of England.

The solemn magnificence of yesterday's opening phase of these last rites was maintained fully. Perhaps the stately grandeur of to-day's sorrowful pageant through the swarming streets of London, with hundreds of thousands of mourners, forming a black border to the route, will never be surpassed. There was in Victoria's funeral procession an absence of that black ceremonial generally connected with the final Progress to the Grave.

To-day the coffin was drawn by cream-colored horses; the pall was white and the uniforms of the troops and the gold trappings of the foreign sovereigns, princes and representatives forming a glittering medley, gave brilliant coloring to the pageant. The chief mourner himself with his field marshal's uniform, even though this was partially hidden by his overcoat, surrounded by his escorts, helped to lighten the symbols of mourning marking the route.

Never in English history has a sovereign been borne to the grave attended by so many distinguished mourners. The gathering of crowned heads far surpassed those who were in the Jubilee procession, and all the great officers of state participated. The display of the naval and military forces reached the great total of 25,000 men.
The firing of minute guns and the

Tolling of Bells

at a quarter past eleven announced to the countless multitudes who had been crowding London streets since daylight that the funeral procession had begun its passage through the capital. The people fought for hours for a glimpse of the coffin, and the Kings and others following it. They saw a long procession of soldiers, a passing show of dizzling regalia with a hundred royalties crowding after and then dispersed, while all the church chimers of the city were ringing and muffled drums were played. Europe has seen grander royal funerals than the Queen's, and had a more gorgeous spectacle in her sixty years of reign, but no episode in the Victorian era will live so deeply impressed on the memories of those who witnessed it or participated in the ceremonies. The day was sombre, wet and chilly, as are most of London's winter days. The cloudy day added to the gloom of the whole city. The scene of Victoria station from early morning was most Brilliant and Impressive.

For to-day's ceremony the station was transformed into an immense reception hall. All trains were stopped before 9 o'clock, and the long platforms were covered with purple cloth. On another platform, facing that at which the Queen's train was to arrive, guards of honor, composed of bluejackets and Grenadier Guards, were drawn up. The broad roadway separating the two was swept clean and sanded, and a number of little purple covered platforms, from which members of the Royal family were expected to mount their horses, were placed at intervals at the side and centre. British naval and military officers and foreign royalties in dazzling uniforms arrived in quick succession, and were conducted to a little pavilion erected on the platform.

The whole station by that time resembled the scene at a levee. The commander-in-chief of the forces, Field Marshal Earl Roberts, on a beautiful spirited brown mare, carrying his field marshal's baton, at this juncture trotted into the station, and became

The Centre of Interest.
He was soon followed by the Earl Marshal, the Duke of Norfolk, and many of the most distinguished British officers. Then came carriages for the Queen and the Princesses. They were the state carriages for the Queen and used on the occasion of the late Queen's jubilee, with beautiful gold-mounted harnesses and trappings. The horses were ridden by order of precedence here observed emphasizes the great change the death of Victoria has made among her daughters. Princess Christian, Princess Beatrice and Princess Louise now yield places to the daughters of the King. The first carriage will contain Queen Alexandra, the Duchess of Fife, now Princess Royal, Princess Victoria and Princess Charles of Denmark. The second carriage will contain the daughters of Queen Victoria and the King of the Belgians.

for splendor and solemn effect. The dominant note in the whole scene was its grand simplicity, and so far as human utterance was concerned, its silence. The sad procession glided along in beautiful order and precision, as though moved by some hidden power. No incident of any kind occurred to mar its stately beauty. There was no accident of any sort ashore or afloat.

It was next to impossible last evening to obtain a bedroom in any West End hotel, and until quite a late hour visitors were eagerly searching all along the route for windows and seats, held at exorbitant prices, to view the procession. The war office announces that the King wishes the flags should continue to fly at half-mast until sunset Monday evening.

THE RUINS OF FROGMORE.

tary invasion, is an equally civil invasion from the provinces. From Victoria station to Paddington station the streets of London are now draped in purple, black and white. In St. James street one meets with a perfect blaze of purple of all shades; Piccadilly is gorgeous. Some of the edifices are entirely veiled with purple cloth, relieved by white bays and fascias. The lamp posts in the middle of the road along the route have all been removed, and the streets are being sanded preparatory to the funeral of today.

At Frogmore the cover of the great stone sarcophagus has been slowly rolled away. When the Queen's remains are laid beside those of the Prince Consort, the stone will be replaced and finally sealed, a marble figure being placed above it. Placing Coffin Aboard the Albert. CORONER, Feb. 1.—After Justice DeLoane House the morning procession of Kings and Princes neared the pier without incident. The surrounding quays were black with expectant thousands. Through the court archways came the few staff officers, then the Hussars, their pipes silent, and all heads bowed. Eight bronzed and bearded tars were drawn up waiting to receive their burden. Then came the mourners, resplendent in their luscious and scarlet, and quickly formed

Sensational Letters

Alleged to Have Been Written by Hawaiian Representative to Filipino

Robert Wilcox Is Charged With Treason Against United States.

Washington, Feb. 1.—The house committee on education has received a charge against a delegate Robert Wilcox, the Hawaiian representative in the house of representatives. This committee has before it the other petitions against Mr. Wilcox. The charges are made in writing by Geo. D. Gear, of Hawaii, who submitted letters purporting to be copies of the letters written by Wilcox to Filipino officers. The alleged letters are of a highly sensational character.

Another letter, dated March 8th, 1890, says: "I am thinking to go to the Philippine Islands and give my assistance to Aguinaldo against the invaders, the hypocritical Yankees, the carpet-bag politicians of Ota." Mr. Wilcox declined to make any extended answer to the charges filed by Mr. Gear. He says he has no fear of the charges made. He admits that he wrote a letter to Dr. Lozada, Capt. Burgos and Senor Luna, introducing C. G. Caesar Morio, an Italian of that city, whom he had known while the latter was in Hawaii, in the '80's. It is alleged: "That Wilcox, in his speeches prior to the election, made use of the strongest kind of anti-American utterances for the purpose of carrying the election, telling the natives that the Americans had stolen their country, and that a vote for him was a vote for the restoration of the queen, and that if he were elected, the queen would be restored; "That said Wilcox was and is guilty of treason against the United States, in that he did, as petitioner is informed and believes, since the annexation of the said Hawaiian Islands, write and send through the United States mails letters treasonable in their nature, wherein he did counsel and incite others to engage in rebellion against the United States and still offer his services to Gen. Aguinaldo to go to the Philippines and fight and engage in open rebellion against the United States; copies of which letters are herewith filed."

A Mother To Mothers.

"I am the mother of five children," writes Mrs. S. E. Rose, of Big Otter, West Va., "and have been as high as eight days in the doctor's hands, and never less than two days with any child until the last. Then I had used two bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and was only two hours in the hands of the doctor."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a woman's medicine. It cures diseases of the womanly organs. It is a wonderful medicine for mothers, making the baby's advent practically painless and giving abundant strength to nurse and nourish the child.

RUMORED DEATH

Of Li Hung Chang—Report Comes From Tien Tsin.

London, Feb. 2.—The Tien Tsin correspondent of the Standard, writing Thursday, says: "It was rumored today in Tien Tsin that Li Hung Chang is dead." No Withdrawal. Berlin, Feb. 2.—The statement emanating from a news agency that Field Marshal Count von Waldersee had sent to the foreign envoys in Peking a letter regarding the gradual evacuation of the Chinese capital and other places held by the allied troops, is entirely without foundation. The foreign office authorizes the Associated Press to deny it. The war office has received the following dispatch from Count von Waldersee: "Peking, Jan. 31.—A column of four companies of cavalry and mounted infantry, all under Gen. von Throna, left here today to scour the district between San Kiau Tien, Cha Tow and the Tombs of the Ming dynasty. "In an explosion at San Hai Kwan a captain and 37 Japanese were killed and 17 wounded. A British captain and sergeant were severely burned."

A bill was framed and submitted to the parliaments for suggestions. The convention met again in Sydney to consider the suggested amendments, and completed its work in Melbourne by adopting the bill, which, with a slight modification as to districts and the site of the capital city, was accepted by large majorities of the electors through the referendum.

The act provides for an indissoluble federal union under the name of the Commonwealth of Australia. A Royal proclamation was issued appointing January 1st as the day of establishment, and Lord Hopetoun has been appointed as the first Governor-General.

retiring every three years. The senators, as well as the members of the house of representatives, are to be chosen by the electors of the popular branch of the legislature in each of the states.

The number of members of the house of representatives is to be maintained as nearly as practicable at twice that of the senators. The house of representatives will consist of seventy-five members, of which number New South Wales is to have twenty-six, Victoria twenty-three, Queensland nine, South Australia seven, Western Australia five, Tasmania five.

The relative functions to be performed by the two houses are in accordance with the well-recognized federal principle.

The house of representatives is to represent the Australian people at large, while upon the senate is conferred the dignity of representing the states as distinct entities. The senate is, therefore, to be regarded as the guardian of state rights, and, owing to the equal representation of each state within its walls, the senators for the smaller states will have the opportunity of redressing any inequalities to which they may be subjected...

There is no analogy between the senate and the ordinary type of second chamber. Chosen by the same electors, under the widest franchise, with a payment to the members of both houses of £400 a year, neither the senate nor the house of representatives can be regarded as likely to become a Conservative chamber, although each will act as a house of revision towards the proposals of the other.

which it originated and recommended amendments. Any act may be disallowed by the Queen within one year from the Governor-General's assent, and so act reserved for the Queen's pleasure shall come into force unless within two years it receives Royal assent.

One of the great objects of the federation is to secure inter-colonial free trade, and the departments of customs and excise, together with all their officers, will be taken over by the Commonwealth immediately on its establishment. The customs revenue amounts to about £800,000,000, and as a check on federal expenditure and to prevent any embarrassment to the states from the withdrawal of so large a proportion of their revenue, it is provided that, for a period of at least ten years, three-quarters of the net revenue shall be refunded or credited to the states.

The Federal government may, in the interest of freedom of trade, regulate navigation and shipping, and may also bid any preferential or discriminating railway rate, which is adjudged to be applied by the Federal authority for the purpose of securing absolute freedom of inter-colonial trade.

The following departments will be taken over by the Commonwealth on dates to be proclaimed: Posts, telegrams, and telephones, naval and military defence, lighthouses, lightships, beacons and buoys and quarantine.

The Commonwealth parliament will have some powers which are at present beyond the province of any of the governments of the several colonies, and whose exercise will lead to an increase of Australian autonomy, such as the relations of the Commonwealth with the islands of the Pacific and fisheries in Australian waters beyond territorial limits.

The relations with the outside world will be matters of Federal concern, so that, seen from the outside, Australia will appear to be under one government, the internal divisions being, from that point of view, hardly visible. On the other hand, the state governments will appear to those within to be of more importance, and will loom larger than the more remote Federal authority; just as it is the walls of a house which are visible to those without, while the partitions which form the rooms are to the inmates the more prominent features.

The Commonwealth will also deal with matters of general concern in which uniformity is desirable, including currency, coinage and legal tender, census and statistics, astronomical and meteorological observations, weights and measures, bills of exchange, bankruptcy, copyright, marriage and divorce.

The Commonwealth is empowered to take over from the states the public debts or a proportion thereof, but this question will require to be considered in conjunction with the transfer also of the liabilities. These consist mainly of the railways, which in Australia are the property of the states, and which the Commonwealth is empowered to acquire, with the consent of the states, on terms to be arranged.

There is also provision for the reference to the Commonwealth by the states of any matters other than those enumerated, but any legislation in such matters again passes the bill and the senate again rejects it, the Governor-General may convene a joint meeting of both houses, and at this meeting an absolute majority of the total number of the members can carry the bill.

All bills passed by the parliament are presented to the Governor-General, who, on behalf of the Queen, may assent to the bill or withhold assent, or may reserve it for the Queen's pleasure, or he may return the bill to the house from will extend only to the initiating states and to those which afterwards may adopt the law.

There are some powers whose enumeration may be regarded as characteristic of the tendency of the times towards the enlargement of the sphere of government activity. Among these are conciliation and arbitration for the prevention and settlement of industrial disputes extending beyond the limitation of any one state, also for invalid and old age pensions, and banking and insurance. Some of the above enumerated powers, such as postal service, coinage and customs, constitute what are known as exclusive powers, and when taken over by the Commonwealth are, ipso facto, removed entirely from the jurisdiction of the states, but in many cases the powers are concurrent and are capable of exercise both by the Commonwealth and the states. The powers of the Federal authority are strictly limited to the subjects enumerated in the act. All powers not explicitly mentioned are reserved to the states whose parliaments will continue to deal with such subjects as lands, agriculture, mining, local government, police, education, and generally all matters of internal government, which constitute about four-fifths of the work at present performed by the colonial legislatures.

The state laws will be connected to or vetoed, or reserved for the Queen's assent, by the state governors, who will continue, as heretofore, to be the direct representatives of the Queen, and will receive their commissions from the Imperial government. The state governors will, therefore, be as independent as the Governor-General in their relative spheres of action. The acts passed by the states touching the powers reserved to them will have a validity as absolute as the Federal laws, and there is no power of interference by the Federal authority by veto or otherwise over the state legislation.

Within their respective spheres both Commonwealth and states are supreme, but if either Commonwealth or state act beyond its allotted boundary, or if a state law conflicts with a Federal law, it is of no effect.

It is, therefore, necessary that in a federation there should be an arbiter always available to pronounce on the validity or otherwise of state or Commonwealth legislation. Such an arbiter is provided by the High Court of Australia, which is to consist of a Chief Justice and at least two other judges.

However skilfully an instrument of government such as the Commonwealth act may be drawn up it is impossible to make provisions for unforeseen conditions and the light of the future must invariably bring into prominence absolute and doubtful points which at the time were little regarded or altogether overlooked. The unfolding and development of such latent features, together with the carrying of well-defined analogies into ambiguous cases, from a work second only in importance to that of framing the constitution in the first instance, and demand interpreters who are cognizant of and saturated with the genius of the constitution, and are fully informed as to the spirit and intention which animate its provisions. That this is the case is abundantly proved by the history of the United States constitution, of which Chief Justice Marshall is held to have the honor of being the second author.

The question as to who the umpire should be, and whether he was to be stato trial by jury is incorporated in the constitution. The Supreme courts of the states will continue to exist as at present, and there will be no diminution of their jurisdiction in either civil or criminal cases, but an appeal will lie from their decisions to the High court.

Any alteration of the constitution must be carried by an absolute majority of both houses, or twice by one house, with an interval of three months, and must be referred for approval by a majority of all the electors, including a majority of the electors in a majority of the states, and is subject to the Royal assent.

The seat of government is to be determined by the Federal parliament, which will assemble about next May. The capital is to comprise a territory of not less than 100 square miles, and must be situated within the boundary of New South Wales, at a distance of not less than 100 miles from Sydney. Meantime the parliament is to meet in Melbourne.

THROUGH TROOP-LINED STREETS

positions in scarlet jackets, with only a narrow band of erape on their arms as a mark of great change. The carriages were closed.

Following the carriages and preceded by an officer, came an object at which every officer in the animated throng instinctively came to the salute and every head was bared. It was the little khaki colored gun carriage which was to carry Queen Victoria's body from Victoria to Paddington station. The eight Hanoverian which drew the late Queen on the occasion of the Jubilee, were used to-day. The gold harness, the scarlet roated postillions and the scarlet and gold covered grooms, who held each of the horses by the bridles, were all the same. Only the little gun carriage in place of the glittering glass and gold coach marked the change. The place for the coffin to rest was over the actual grave, from her tired were on the wheels; but this was the only alteration.

It was then nearly 11 o'clock, and amid cries "the King of Portugal's horse," "the Grand Duke of Hesse's horse," and so on the princess stepped a minute ahead of the time the train steamed into the station. All heads were uncovered as the saloon carriage bearing the Queen's remains stopped exactly opposite the gun carriage, and King Edward, Queen Alexandra, Emperor William and others alighted.

Then the hearse party advanced to the saloon carriage. With his hand at the salute, and standing a little in advance of the others, King Edward watched the coffin.

Removal of the Coffin to the gun carriage. It was accomplished and the pall and the regalia of the British crown were placed on the coffin. The King and the others with him then mounted and the procession started.

Three thousand soldiers and sailors, picked companies, representing all branches of the service, formed the advanced escort. They Marched Slowly and without Music.

Most of the uniforms were covered with dark crests, and the standards were draped with black, the officers wearing bands of erape on their sleeves. They were half an hour in passing. Then came Field Marshal Earl Roberts and his staff, and after them four massed bands playing the funeral march. Three hundred musicians announced the coming of the body of the Queen. There was a long array of court officials.

The coffin was almost past before the spectators recognized its presence by removing their hats. It was a pathetically small oblong black, concealed beneath a rich pall of white satin, on corners of which gleamed the Royal arms. Above the pall the Royal standard was draped and a large crown of gold encrusted with jewels rested.

At the Head of the Coffin, which was at the end of the gun carriage just over the gun. At the foot of the coffin were two smaller crowns with a gold jewelled sceptre lying between them.

Hung about the coffin walked the steward bearers, and on either side were the Queen's equestrians, lords-in-waiting and physicians. Then came a group of magnificent attired horsemen.

Immediately after the three Royal Yeomen rode abreast. King Edward VII. was the central figure of three, but no less ostentatious personage was in the procession. A black chaparral with a plume of white feathers was on his head and a long black cloak was buttoned around him and hung down over the bit his horse which he was riding. The King's face Seemed Grieved and Car-worn.

He looked straight ahead and apparently at the gun carriage. He gave no sign of seeing the long ranks of soldiers heeding back the populace about him; the windows crowded with black bonneted women, the multitudes of uncovered heads, the people drooping and the green wreaths everywhere. He passed like a man alone. Beside King Edward rode Emperor William, looking every inch a soldier. He glanced right and left as he rode, and his hand frequently was raised to the red and white feathers, hanging over his hat as he responded to salutes. Emperor William wore a black cloak over his new British field marshal's uniform. On the left rode the Duke of Connaught, a man of soldierly appearance, dressed in military and unrecognised by the people.

In the second rank behind rode two more sovereigns, the Kings of Greece and Portugal, both glittering with gold lace. There followed a dazzling array of Members of Royal Families, numbering forty in all and riding three abreast. The next section of the procession included the six Royal carriages. A military escort, including a detachment from the Queen's German Dragon regiment, composed the last section of the procession.

After the funeral party itself, the dominating figure of the day was Field Marshal Earl Roberts. When his well-known bronzed face came in view, the people forgot the solemnity of the occasion and broke into cheers.

Shouting "Bobs,"
and other expressions of familiar approval. The military attaches of all the embassies and legations were with Lord Roberts's staff. In the front rank rode the American attaché, Major Edward B. Cassatt, in an infantry officer's full dress.

The funeral procession occupied two hours in passing from Victoria station to the station at Paddington.

The decorations everywhere were impressive but not elaborate.

It was precisely 12:30 p.m. when the guards lining the platform of Paddington station came to a sharp "attention," and the head of the procession entered the building. For half an hour all was hushed save the clatter of horses' hoofs and the rattle of the heavy gun carriages. The pall was removed from the coffin and the casket was deposited in the saloon carriage which the Queen had so often occupied in her lifetime.

King Edward, Queen Alexandra and the Duke of Connaught stood grouped together as the coffin was borne in, and then they all took seats and the train started for Windsor.

Arrived at Windsor,
Windsor, Feb. 2.—Great throngs of people assembled in the vicinity of the railway station to meet the coffin. At 2:30 p. m. the guns of a battery stationed on Castle Hill signalled the arrival of the funeral train.

As the procession started at 2:40 p. m. the artillery horses attached to the gun carriage became restive and nearly overturned it, whereupon King Edward ordered the horses to be taken off and bluejackets put in their places to draw the gun carriage.

The funeral procession entered the chapel, where the service was held, at 3:15.

The body will lie until Monday in the Albert memorial chapel.

No Stars and Stripes.
London, Feb. 2.—H. Hales, the Australian newspaper correspondent in the course of a description of the naval pageant in the Daily News, says:

"I looked for Russia's flag and looked in vain. No Russian flag marked the last pathway on the seas which our country Queen should take. I saw the flag of France and saw how every man of us who saw her, our sweet Queen by those who manned the Frenchman's boats, I saw the flag of Spain floating in honor to our sovereign lady, and then looked ahead for the flag that of all flags is thought to be the most precious, our own, the Star Spangled Banner of America, and I saw it not. Has memory so soon outrun her race that they who live beneath that flag can forget the debts they owe to us? We stood between them and a drowning world but yesterday."

SPIRITUALISM.
B. H. Kneeshaw will lecture in the St. William Wallace hall at 7:30 p. m.; subject, "What is Spiritualism, and Who Are Spiritualists?" The lecture will be followed with clairvoyant readings and impressions. Collection at the door.

The death occurred at St. Joseph's hospital last night of Capt. Thomas Turle, who for long was in the C. P. N. Company's employ, and died of different times as pilot and mate on the Skagway steamers. Deceased has been ailing for several months, having been first compelled to lay off work through the effects of a fall off a gang plank, happening in going aboard the steamer Anne one dark night. Pneumonia afterwards set in, and later a complication of troubles, which caused his death. Deceased was a native of Wighton, Cumberland, England, and came to British Columbia on the D. G. S. Quadri. He was 40 years of age and a member of the K. of P. and Masonic orders. The funeral will take place on Sunday.

The remains of the late Madame Heller were laid at rest this afternoon. The funeral took place from the residence, Pandora avenue, and later from the Roman Catholic cathedral. The religious services were conducted both at the church and grave by Rev. Father Althoff.

Steamer Charmer left Vancouver at 2:30 after connecting with the Eastern train, which was one hour late.

TWO YEARS AHEAD.—"For eight years I suffered as no one ever did with rheumatism; for two years I lay in bed; could not do much as for myself. A friend recommended South American Rheumatic Cure. After three doses I could sit up. Today I am as strong as ever I was."—Mrs. John Cook, 287 Clinton street, Toronto. Sold by Dean & Hiscocks and Hall & Co.—2

YOU CAN'T DO IT
You can't get first-class electrical goods in a second-class electrical supply store, any more than you can blow out an electric light. Why sacrifice time, then? If you will consult us, you will get the best goods, the best service, the best materials. Don't believe what we say, but put us to the test. Have you seen our Table Lamp, or our 75c. Night Lamp?

Falling Hair
Does this illustrate your experience? Are you worried for fear you are soon to be bald? Then cease worrying for help is at hand. You need something that will put new life into the hair bulbs.

You need hair food, such as

WATER'S HAIR VIGOR

It brings health to the hair, and the falling ceases. It always restores color to gray hair. You need not look at thirty as if you were fifty, for your gray hair may have again all the dark, rich color of youth. And there is no remedy equal to it for curing dandruff.

$1.00 a bottle. All druggists.
"I am a barber by trade and have had a great deal to do with your Hair Vigor. I have found that it will do everything that you claim for it. It has given me the most complete success in my business." Henry J. Gronow, Kansas City, Mo., March 25, 1899.

Write the Doctor.
If you do not obtain all the benefits you expect from the use of the Vigor, write the Doctor about it. Address, Dr. J. C. AYER, Lowell, Mass.
